begun the full-scale use of Legal Brain Agent —

Bengo4.com, Inc. (Minato-ku, Tokyo; Taichiro Motoe, Representative Director, President and CEO, Lawyer; hereinafter the “Company”) is pleased to announce that Legal Brain Agent, an AI agent specializing in legal affairs, has been introduced at Anderson Mori & Tomotsune (Chiyoda-ku, Tokyo; hereinafter “AMT”), a leading law firm in Japan.

■ Background of the introduction: Overwhelming convenience verified in a trial

AMT has examined many different tools, positioning the improvement of the quality of legal services and the efficiency of its business using state-of-the-art technologies as an important business challenge. As part of its examination of these efforts, they experimented with a general-purpose large language model (LLM) for legal research and objectively confirmed the high degree of usefulness and the practicality of Legal Brain Agent during trial use. This is why AMT has introduced Legal Brain Agent.

■ Highly valued point: Overwhelming reliability that stands up to professional use

In this trial, the high accuracy and reliability of the answers provided by Legal Brain Agent were valued particularly highly, as this is an essential requirement in legal practice.

(1) Legal Brain Agent contains a huge amount of legal literature

Legal Brain Agent only generates answers based on highly reliable sources of data, such as laws, regulations, precedents, guidelines, and specialized books. This minimizes the occurrence of hallucinations which were an issue with general-purpose LLMs to provide output that relies on supporting literature.

(2) High reliability and clear sources

Legal Brain Agent allows users to instantly track down the documents and parts of documents that the AI's answers are based, making it easy to verify the accuracy of the data. This high reliability led to AMT determining that Legal Brain Agent would have sufficient utility as a research tool for professional use.

■ Future outlook: Moving forward to next-generation workstyles through multi-agent collaboration

AMT's introduction of Legal Brain Agent represents a new standard for the use of AI in legal practice. At the same time, we are conducting a demonstration test of the first multi-agent collaboration in legal practice in Japan in cooperation with AMT and Mirai Translate, Inc. (hereinafter "Mirai Translate"), as announced previously. Going forward, we will migrate this collaboration to a seamless use environment using an AI platform provided by Mirai Translate in light of the results of the demonstration test. Through this initiative, the Company will realize next-generation workstyles in which AI agents work collaboratively to perform a series of tasks from general information collection to advanced specialized research to accelerate innovation in legal services.

■ Company comments regarding the introduction

Wataru Shimizu, Partner at Anderson Mori & Tomotsune

"The idea that generative AI makes mistakes and cannot be used as a research tool is an old-fashioned idea and a preconception. Legal Brain Agent is an epoch-making agent that includes a broad range of data from precedents and guidelines to legal books while fully using the characteristics of generative AI. I recommend it to you, especially if you are working in a legal sector, are pressed for time and tend to neglect the checking of sources. I look forward to seeing agent collaborations in the future."

Yuji Inagaki, General Manager of the Legal Brain Development Department, Bengo4.com, Inc.

"I am extremely pleased that Anderson Mori & Tomotsune, a leader of the legal world in Japan, introduced Legal Brain Agent. AI must be overwhelmingly reliable in the control of hallucinations and capable of verifying information by enabling legal professionals to instantaneously check sources so that they can use AI in their practice. Making a fresh start following the introduction of Legal Brain Agent, we will continue our development to further advance products, including products involving the multi-agent collaboration."

■ About Legal Brain Agent

Legal Brain Agent is an AI agent specialized in legal affairs that is equipped with the Legal Brain legal-specialized AI platform developed exclusively by the Company. It understands the user's research intention through natural language input, clearly indicates links to the sources (*1) that are used to produce the answer, automatically extracts legal issues, and presents them in an easy-to-understand bullet-points format. It considerably reduces complex, time-consuming, and labor-intensive research tasks, helping to create an environment where lawyers, legal staff, and other professionals can concentrate on more value-added work.

*1: Relevant laws and regulations, precedents, technical books, guidelines, etc.
