Kojima Selected for CDP's 2025 Climate Change "A List" for the First Time, Receiving the Highest Evaluation

Kojima Co., Ltd., headquartered in Tochigi Prefecture, Japan, has been recognized by CDP, an international nonprofit organization, for its leadership in transparency and performance in the field of climate change, being selected for CDP's annual "A List" for the first time.

CDP operates the world's only independent environmental information disclosure system, evaluating thousands of companies each year. In 2025, more than 22,100 companies disclosed information through the CDP platform, with 20,000 assigned scores. Companies that achieve an "A" score are global leaders in disclosing comprehensive information, demonstrating a high level of environmental governance, and making meaningful progress toward environmental resilience.

We believe that our inclusion in the Climate Change "A List" reflects strong recognition of our public support for TCFD recommendations, proactive information disclosure, and various initiatives to reduce greenhouse gas emissions, measures we implement in response to climate change. Our material priorities include "supporting future consumer electronics" to promote home appliances that are friendly to the environment and people, and "stores supporting the future" for the creation of stores friendly to the environment and people and useful for daily lives. Moving forward, under our purpose statement, "To be a company that supports everyday living by providing consumer electronics with a view toward the creation of a bright and happy future full of smiles," we will continue to cooperate with all parties involved, not only internally but across our entire supply chain, to address environmental challenges and help build a sustainable society.
